Reservoir computing is a framework for training recurrent neural networks.
In this approach, only the readout weights are trained, while the reservoir is kept fixed.
We show that the echo state property is essential for stable learning.